Renn Succeeds Burger As 10th Ward Alderman

After Common Council Had Voted His Seat Vacant, Mr. Burger Said He Would Abide by Decision Rather Than Fight It Out in Court, Thereby Saving Taxpayers Money—Budget Action Friday Night.

Many who know that the reason for this action tonight is due to the fact that I have dared to defend the unemployed and the working class," said Charles Burger at the regular meeting of the common council Tuesday evening after he had listened to the council action in declaring his seat as alderman of the Tenth ward vacant. Mr. Burger, who was given the privilege of the floor after the council by a vote of 10 to 2 had adopted the report of the laws and rules committee declaring the seat vacant, said that in order to save the taxpayers of the city money he was not going to defend himself through course of law, but would accept the council action.

The question of the eligibility of Mr. Burger to sit as an alderman was brought to the attention of the council on New Year's Day when Mayor Walker sent in a communication stating that Mr. Burger's name did not appear on the general city tax roll preceding the election in November and that under the provisions of the city charter he could not hold office as an alderman. The communication from the mayor was referred to the laws and rules committee.

The committee in a report submitted to the council Tuesday evening upheld the mayor's contention and declared the election of Mr. Burger to be null and void.

On the vote on the committee's report Alderman Epstein of the Sixth ward said he had sought the advice of counsel in the matter and had been informed that the mayor and common council had no authority to declare the office vacant; that that could only be done by court action, and for that reason he voted "no." The other alderman who voted "no" was Alderman Kelly of the Seventh ward.

Mr. Burger was elected last November by a majority of one vote defeating Alderman Judson Neice for the office.

Tuesday evening the council chamber was crowded with a large audience who had gathered expecting to hear some verbal fireworks, but they were disappointed for Mr. Burger accepted the council action, and after stating that he believed action had been taken against him because of his activities with the unemployed he left his seat as alderman of the Tenth ward and took a seat in the audience where he listened to the proceedings of the session.

Mayor Walker sent in a communication naming Fred L. Rann of 78 Henry street as alderman of the Tenth ward to succeed Mr. Burger.

To Borrow $75,000
Mayor Walker in a communication called the attention of the council to the need of borrowing $75,000 in anticipation of the collection of taxes and that provision was made in the budget for that amount. The communication was referred to the finance, ways and means committee, and a recess taken at the close of which the committee reported favorably. The report was adopted unanimously by the council.

Budget Action Friday
President Heislman informed the council that it had been impossible to get the budget ready for submission at the meeting that evening and Alderman Leirey moved that when the present meeting adjourn it adjourn to Friday evening when the budget would be considered.

Mrs. Dregman Is Heard
Mrs. Adele Dregman sent in a communication in which she stated she was opposed to having water taxes included on the city tax bill. She said it had resulted in great inconvenience to everyone, and that she believed the water department should collect its own bills.

On motion of Alderman Doherty the communication was referred to the laws and rules committee with the suggestion that the committee take the matter up with the water board.

"Patsy" Phillips Ends Over Half Century Of Railroad Service

Patrick F. "Patsy" Phillips of 7 Clifton avenue on Sunday finished up 54 and one-half years of railroad service when he concluded his run from Kingston to Oneonta, and is now enjoying a well earned rest at his home in this city.

Mr. Phillips retired as a conductor, he having worked up to that position from the starting point of a "news butcher" on the Ulster & Delaware, now the Catskill Mountain branch of the New York Central Railroad.

At the age of 16, Mr. Phillips became a brakeman, his first real job as a railroad, on the Ulster & Delaware, in June, 1879. Five years later, June 23, 1884, he was promoted to the rank of conductor, in which position he served more than 49 and one-half years up to his retirement.

The veteran of the rails has seen service on every kind of train—freight, milk and passenger. On the latter class of service he was stationed for 35 years. He has slept in cabooses at least one third of the nights of his life, one co-worker says.

Never in a Wreck
Phillips has never been in a wreck, he said, and he did not recall a single serious accident to a passenger train during the entire time he was on the road. In fact he remembered few wrecks of any kind, most of these to coal trains.

When he began working for the U. & D. the road operated only between Kingston and Stamford. Late in June, 1900, the run was extended to Oneonta. The road came into possession of the New York Central in February, 1932.

Some veteran railway conductors may have had runs that took them over more territory, but it is doubtful if many have worked so long through a more beautiful country than that through which the Catskill branch of the Central passes. And "Patsy" smiled appreciatively at a reference to the loveliness of the scenery past which his daily task had taken him for so many years.

Heart Attack Fatal
To Mrs. J. C. Shultis
In Cellar of Her Home
Mrs. Jennie C. Shultis, widow of John W. Shultis, died suddenly of heart disease about 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the cellar of her home, 43 Gage street. She had gone to the cellar carrying a lighted lamp when she was seized with a heart attack. The lamp fell when she was taken ill and exploded and she was burned about the face. Mrs. Shultis's son, John, discovered the body shortly after and after extinguishing the flames called Dr. Kenneth LeFevre, who responded and after an examination pronounced death due to heart trouble.

Coroner W. N. Conner was summoned and upon request of the family turned the body over to Jensen and Deegan.

Surviving are two sons, Charles and John; two daughters, Miss Ann Shultis of Philadelphia and Mrs. Sylvia Harris of Smyrna, Delaware; five grandchildren; three brothers, Avery L. and George B. Newell of this city, and Chester A. Newell of Bloomington. The funeral will be held from the parlors of Jensen and Deegan, 112 Broadway, Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Interment will be in the family plot in the Chichester cemetery.

Retail Coal Prices
Advance 25 Cents
The first of the year there was a general advance of 25 cents a ton in the retail price on all domestic sizes of coal in Kingston. The advance in the retail price is said to be due to a similar advance received by the retailers from the wholesale dealers.

Antiquated Village and City Governments Topic of Lehman

Bitterest Political Revolt in Years Ebbs Long Enough to Allow Governor Lehman to Address 157th Legislature on Program for Year—Macy Blocks Re-election of Hammond.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 2 (AP).—Torn by the bitterest political revolt in many years, the 157th New York Legislature patched up its troubles today long enough to hear Governor Lehman recommend that the government of all municipalities, from New York city to the smallest village, be completely overhauled.

The governor told the legislators that local tax bills would be "substantially reduced" by eliminating the elaborate overlapping of thousands of local government functions.

Mr. Lehman began his annual message a few minutes after Republican State Chairman W. Kingsland Macy, who had been fighting desperately to control the Republican Assembly, successfully blocked the re-election of Assembly Clerk Fred W. Hammond.

Hammond failed by nine votes to get a majority. His defeat was due to Macy's success in turning 18 Republican assembly leaders against the old line assembly leaders.

The governor urged the legislature to abolish "the indefensible anomaly" of partisan boards of election still existing in six counties—Nassau, Oneida, Suffolk, Westchester, Niagara and Monroe.

"In all other countries there are bipartisan boards of election," he said. "In these six counties, for no sufficient reason, the supervision and control of the election machinery still remain in the hands of members of one party alone. Nothing but exaggerated partisanship can defend the continuance of this abuse. It is essentially unfair. I recommend again that it be corrected."

The governor repeated his last year's recommendation of a four year term of the state executive. He also repeated his suggestion that the people be empowered to initiate state constitutional amendments.

His labor program was similar to that of the State Federation of Labor, and included ratification of the child labor amendment.

Of unemployment relief and its relation to state financing, he said he would communicate with the legislature later. He also promised to transmit recommendations on banking, insurance, mortgages on real estate, public health, administration of justice "and other subjects."

He appealed to the legislature to continue and strengthen the milk control board, but he deferred other recommendations until later.

He explained that he would have more to say after the Supreme Court of the United States has decided the constitutionality of the milk law and after the AAA has acted on a milk-shed code.

Of the agricultural situation in general, the governor said: "Prices are still much too low to bring broad contentment and prosperity to farms."

He found, however, that the situation has improved and New York farmers are better off than those of most states. He told the legislators prices of New York farm products in November were 56 per cent of the pre-war level, compared with 56 per cent in February.

The emergency conditions affecting the dairy industry, which call for passage of the milk control law, (last April) still exist, I therefore, recommend that the functions of the milk control board be extended for another year," he said.

He made no direct reference to Secretary of Agriculture Charles H. Baldwin's request for $5,000,000 to eradicate diseased cattle.

The governor said he hoped soon to obtain $10,000,000 from the PWA for farm-to-market roads.

Highlights in the Governor's Message

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 2 (AP).—Highlights of Governor Lehman's message:

Reorganization of local government: "The weakness of local government is a handicap to the state itself. Above all, it promotes a powerful invisible government."

Adoption of my recommendations: "I will bring to every taxpayer in the state substantial reductions in local taxation."

Liquor: "The natural unstimulated desire of normal human beings for alcoholic beverages, served in decent surroundings, should not be artificially curbed."

Milk and agriculture: "Prices are still much too low."

Slum clearance: "One of the best channels for a public works program directed toward a general economic recovery."

Water power: "Permit municipalities to purchase and sell electricity developed from the St. Lawrence."

Municipal credit: "Not a single city in New York state has defaulted. We cannot overlook the fact that default is always possible."

Adopt legislation to safeguard the holders of municipal bonds.

Half Billion Dollar Liquor Tax Bill Today Passes Means Group

Now in Order For Introduction in House—Provides $2 a gallon Levy on Distilled Spirits, $5 a barrel on Beer, Scale on Wines—No Changes Made in Bill.

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP).—The House Ways and Means committee today formally approved the final draft of the half billion dollar liquor tax bill and its introduction in the House was in order.

The measure provides a $2 a gallon tax on distilled spirits, $5 a barrel on beer and graduated rates on wines ranging from 10 to 40 cents a gallon.

The committee planned to meet in executive session later in the day after the bill was formally introduced in order to report it out and expedite bringing it up for House consideration this week.

Chairman Doughton said he hoped to be able to call the bill up tomorrow.

There were no changes made today in the bill, the committee voting down a proposal by Representative Knutson (R-Minn.) to triple the import duties on goods, including liquors from countries which are more than 10 per cent in default of their war debt payments to the United States.

The measure does not touch the tariff rates, the committee earlier having decided to leave them alone in view of contemplated reciprocal negotiations by the administration.

A tax of 30 cents on floor stocks of spirits and liquors is provided, the difference between the present $1.10 rate and the $2 tax. A 30 cent additional levy, the present differential, is put on blended liquors.

Fire Chief Murphy And Fireman Maines Honored on Tuesday

Complete 25 Years of Service in Fire Department and Event Is Marked by Presentation of Service Rings to Them by The Members of The Paid Fire Department.

Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy and Fireman William Maines of the city fire department have rounded out a quarter of a century as firemen in Kingston and the event was marked Tuesday evening at the Central Fire station when the members of the paid fire department presented both men with handsome service rings.

Deputy Chief Fred M. Leveitch on behalf of the men made the presentation to Chief Murphy, while Fireman William Maines made the presentation to Fireman Maines. Fireman Harold Sanford presided as chairman of the meeting, which was attended by the board of fire commissioners and the members of the paid fire department.

Fire Chief Murphy became a volunteer fireman when a youth as a member of Union Hose Company and became a member of the paid fire department in 1908 when he was assigned to the Central Fire Station deputy fire chief under Fire Chief Rodney A. Chipp, who retired in 1924, when Chief Murphy was made head of the fire department.

When Chief Murphy assumed duties as deputy fire chief in 1908 there were but 19 men in the paid fire department and since then the number has increased to the present force of 30 men. In 1908 the motor apparatus was horse-drawn, but in later years the department has become entirely motorized.

During the past 25 years some of the big fires that have occurred while Chief Murphy was head of the department were the Cornell coal pockets, Turk's lumber yard, the Kingston Dairy, Washington Hall, J. T. Johnson's store, Dey's elder mill, Teller & Tappen coal pockets, the Rice machine shops, Stock & Cordis furniture store, the Clifton Building, the Forman building and the Kingston Hospital.

Chief Murphy in receiving the ring thanked the men for the honor conferred on him and Fireman Maines said: "My association with the men of the department has been pleasant and seems but a few years. The hearty cooperation and willingness on the part of the men has brought the department up to a high standing of efficiency and today the department stands second to none in the state. We have advanced from the horse-drawn days of the fire apparatus to the entire motorization of the department. An inspection system has been installed, the department has purchased an aerial truck, we have a fire school and drill tower. The department has also installed a foam generator and inhalator."

Fireman Wright Maines became a member of the paid department on December 1, 1908, and was assigned to Wiltwyck fire station. He is a young man was a volunteer fireman and a member of the Excelsior Hose Company, and today is one of the most efficient members of the fire department.

Army of 7,000 Men Start Search for Dead In Ravaged Districts

Los Angeles, Jan. 2 (AP).—Searching for victims and rehabilitating stricken areas, an army of 7,000 men was organized today to bring order out of the chaos created by the New Year's Day flood here.

A death list of 24 and a report of 75 persons missing was before city and county officials as they dispatched workmen into the flood-ravaged districts. All but three of the dead had been identified. Forty-nine persons were reported seriously injured.

Conservative estimates predicted a total death toll around 50. Officials believed most of the persons listed as missing were among the homeless being taken care of by relief agencies and had not had an opportunity to report escape from the storm.

Damage estimates generally ranged around $5,000,000, the principal loss being confined to the Glendale-Monrovia area, where the flood originated, roaring down Picken Canyon and demolishing about 300 residences, some of them costly homes.

In the Venice district, near the ocean some 30 miles from the Glendale-Monrovia area, between 1,500 and 2,000 homes were damaged extensively by partial inundation when the torrents leaped the banks of flood channels.

A motorcycle unit and clear skies aided workmen yesterday as all civic and governmental organizations joined hands in heroic efforts to provide for the homeless, protect inhabitants of the flooded districts from the threat of disease, reopen highways, construct or strengthen bridges and restore rail traffic.

Rainfall in Los Angeles totaled 8.27 inches during the storm, which began late last Saturday, continuing through New Year's Day. Most of the rain fell between midnight and dawn Sunday. It was a cloudburst which started the flood, 15 inches of rain falling in some of the mountain districts surrounding Glendale-Monrovia. The precipitation broke Southern California records.

No Specific Recommendations Made By President Roosevelt In Message To Congressmen

"Recovery Means Reform"

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

President In Message To Congress Defies "Old Days" Advocates

Evines Determination to Cleave to Emergency Program—Sees No Worldwide Currency Stabilization in Prospect—Federal Budget Message Thursday.

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP).—The 73rd Congress today resumed its tasks with a personal address by President Roosevelt, asserting the nation is "in the process of recovery" and evincing his determination to cleave to the emergency program.

Gripping the desk at which he stood before the thronged House of Representatives, the President defied advocates of "a return to old methods," exonerated wrongdoers of the banking and financial worlds in calling for regulatory legislation and spoke of "permanent readjustment" of many social and economic arrangements.

His audience comprised the entire membership of Senate and House, members of his cabinet and the front rank of official, diplomatic and social Washington that splashed the galleries with brilliant and formal dress.

Crisply, he recommended his gold and silver buying policy and said there was no present prospect of world currency stabilization. Before proceeding to the Capitol, he had let it be known that he now sees no chance for early international money action for some time.

Specific recommendations he withheld at this time, but left no doubt that he considers the NRA a permanent, constructive achievement and plans to follow his current policy and civil work, policies.

In later messages he will transmit recommendations, including one dealing with reciprocal tariff powers opposed by the Republican leaders.

Message Is Hailed.
One of the first to hail his message was Speaker Rainey, while opposition leaders spoke skeptically. Senator McNary, the Republican leader, called the message "the finest repeal of the constitution I have ever heard."

While cheerful about American conditions, Mr. Roosevelt viewed the world situation less optimistically. His attitude was one of seeking counsel, "in order that without partisanship you and I may cooperate to continue the restoration of national well-being" and "to build on the ruins of the past a new structure."

"We have ploughed the furrow and planted the good seed," he said in conclusion. "The hard breaking is over."

For tomorrow he reserved the important message on the Federal budget, with its huge and growing deficit.

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP).—The text of President Roosevelt's address to a joint session of Congress today follows:

I come before you at the opening of the regular session of the 73rd Congress, not to make requests for special or detailed items of legislation; I come, rather, to counsel with you, who, like myself, have been selected to carry out a mandate of the whole people, in order that with out partisanship you and I may cooperate to continue the restoration of our national well-being and, equally important, to build on the ruins of the past a new structure designed better to meet the present problems of modern civilization.

Such a structure includes not only the relations of industry and agriculture and finance to each other, but also the effect which all of these three have on our individual citizens and on the whole people as a nation.

Now that we are definitely in the process of recovery, lines have been richly drawn between those to whom this recovery means a return to old methods, and the number of these people is small, and those for whom recovery means a reform of many old methods, a permanent readjustment of many of our ways of thinking and therefore of many of our social and economic arrangements.

Civilization can not go back; civilization must not stand still. We have undertaken new methods. It is our task to perfect, to improve, to alter when necessary, but in all cases to go forward. To consolidate what we are doing, to make our economic and social structure capable of dealing with modern life is the joint task of the legislative, the judicial, and the executive branches of the national government.

Without regard to party, the overwhelming majority of our people seek a greater opportunity for humanity to prosper and find happiness. They recognize that human welfare has not increased and does not increase through mere materialism and luxury, but that it does progress through integrity, unselfishness, responsibility and justice.

In the past few months, as a result of our action, we have demanded of many citizens that they surrender certain licenses to do as they pleased in their business relationships. But we have asked this in exchange for the protection which the state can give against exploitation by their fellow men or by combinations of their fellow men.

Congratulates Congress
I congratulate this Congress upon the courage, the earnestness and the efficiency with which you met the crisis at the special session. It was your fine understanding of the national problem that furnished the example which the country has so splendidly followed. I venture to say that the task confronting the first Congress of 1789 was no greater than your own.

I shall not attempt to set forth either the many phases of the crisis which we experienced last March, nor the many measures which you and I undertook during the special session that we might initiate recovery and reform.

It is sufficient that I should speak in broad terms of the results of our common counsel.

The credit of the government has been fortified by drastic reduction in the cost on its permanent agencies through the Economy Act.

With the two-fold purpose of strengthening the whole financial structure and of arriving eventually at a medium of exchange which will have over the years less variable purchasing and debt paying power for our people than that of the past, I have used the authority granted me to purchase all American produced gold and silver and to buy additional gold in the world markets.

Careful investigation and constant study prove that in the matter of foreign exchange rates, certain of our sister nations find themselves handicapped by internal and other conditions that they feel unable to overcome. They are now studying the situation in the light of our permanent world-wide objectives.

The overhauling machinery of a bank, both national and state, which is needed and which is being undertaken and have been begun within the protection of Federal authority. In the case of those banks which were not permitted to reopen, nearly $100,000,000 of Federal deposits are being restored to the depositories through the assistance of the national government.

National Industrial Recovery Act
We have made great strides toward the objectives of the National Industrial Recovery Act, for not only have several millions of our unemployed been restored to work, but industry is organizing itself with a

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON — When Henry Morgenthau, Jr., clamped down his "treasury" ban on treasury news from becoming news, Washington correspondents immediately concentrated on his department.

Those who formerly dropped in at the treasury on the rarest of occasions began making it their business to call daily. Attendance at Morgenthau's press conferences increased perceptibly.

They started writing stories, too—many of them not concerned with routine treasury business or coming through official channels which the acting secretary had set up.

As a favorite theme, many of these stories dealt with the changes of handshakes in personnel under Morgenthau. His moves to surround himself with advisers of his own choosing, encouraged the reporters to anticipate who would be the next to go.

There were indications that this finally got on the acting secretary's nerves.

Oil On The Waters

THE climax came when word went out that Walter J. Cummings, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, had resigned and would accept the chairmanship of a bank board in Chicago.

Obviously disturbed at the report of Cummings' resignation, Morgenthau sent out a call for newspapermen regularly assigned to cover the treasury to come to his office. When they had assembled he immediately disclaimed any knowledge of Cummings' departure from the treasury. More than that, he praised Cummings' work and expressed the hope that he would remain in the treasury "as long as I do."

He requested newspapermen to make public his attitude. He would "appreciate it" if they would.

What seemed odd about the whole affair was that no denial was made that Cummings would resign. Despite the acting secretary's agitation the report persisted that he would get out before very long.

Entirely Unofficial

THE seriousness with which Morgenthau talked to the newspapermen was relieved by another visitor to the secretarial chambers in the shape of a very fine rooster spaniel dog.

During the whole of the interview the rooster spaniel frisked and scampered about the chamber climbing over the newspapermen to receive friendly pats or jumping in and out of vacant chairs.

When Morgenthau had concluded, someone asked: "Mr. Secretary, is the dog a new acquisition to your official family?" Morgenthau smiled wryly and replied: "No, he belongs to my daughter, but—must that go into the story?"

Washington avenue was moved to the corner of Lucas avenue. Alderman Kelly—That the CWA men get their pay on working days. Alderman Reinhard—That a street sign be placed at Dunn and Burnett streets, and also at the corner of Brooks street.

Alderman Epstein—That all the hills in the Sixth ward be sanded, and that the snow and ice be removed from the streets in that ward. Alderman Schwenk and Leirey—That board of public works make repairs at once, filling the holes in East Chester street.

Alderman Zucca—That an electric street light be placed on Crown

On every fine tobacco plant there are only a few leaves that we buy for Lucky Strike. Not the top leaves—because they are underdeveloped. Not the bottom leaves—because those are inferior in quality. We select only the center leaves—because the center leaves are the mildest and fully ripe for perfect smoking. Only the center leaves are used in making Luckies—so round, so firm, so fully packed—free from loose ends that spill out, that cling to lips. Is it any wonder Luckies are mild and smooth? And remember, "It's toasted"—for throat protection—for finer taste.

Bitten by Rat in Pool Table Pocket

FR. WAYNE, I.C.—L. F. Schroeder, age twenty-three, of Indianapolis, received injuries to his forearm as the result of a rat running up his coat sleeve when he reached for a ball in the pocket of a pool table at a billiard hall here.

The rat bit him severely near the elbow.

MYSTERY UNSOLVED AFTER 38 YEARS

No Trace Found of Wife Who Vanished in 1895.

Webster, Mass.—Webster's greatest mystery is more than thirty-eight years old, and no nearer solution than at the time of its origin.

Jerry Staskowicz, only surviving principal, is an inmate of Webster infirmary now. Still quite vigorous, he does chores about the grounds, but seldom talks—and never about the strange case of 1895.

In January of that year Staskowicz' wife and his seven-year-old son, one of three children, vanished. They never have been heard from. Jerry said then, and probably would now, if he wished to talk, that they had run away to their native Poland. But though Mrs. Staskowicz had many relatives in the Webster area, never a word did she send them.

The Staskowicz family, like many of those who came over from "the old country," took a farm known variously as the Blackmer place and the Morrissey place. It was situated across the town line in the Connecticut community of East Thompson, on the southern shore of Webster lake.

The farm failed to afford them a comfortable living, so Mrs. Staskowicz went to work in a mill in Webster. On the morning of January 14, 1895, Staskowicz took neighbors and relatives that his wife had taken their oldest child and left him. At first he said she fled with another man. The relatives, doubtful and apprehensive, sought help from the parish priest, who asked authorities to investigate.

Police found the five room farmhouse in a deplorable condition. Cellings, floors and walls of an entry, first floor room and the cellar were blood stained. Gory clothing likewise was confiscated, as were a stained flannel and a revolver with broken butt. The ramshackle barn, housing a calf, cow and goat, was in far tidier condition.

Staskowicz, cooking potatoes in a tea kettle in the kitchen, was placed under arrest. He said the blood came from chickens he had slaughtered in the house. Some of the stains subsequently were declared as of human origin. But authorities vainly searched the grounds and the lake, including a quicksand bog, for additional evidence of foul play.

Judge Oscar Tourtellotte dismissed Staskowicz after a hearing held in Thompson town hall for lack of sufficient evidence of a crime.

West Virginian Slays Bobcat With Bare Hands

Martinsburg, W. Va.—The man so tough he walked barbed-wire fences every morning before breakfast with a wildcat under each arm found a counterpart near here when Robert Raines disposed of a bobcat bare-handed.

While out hunting, Raines' dog chased into a cave some animal Raines could not see. Following, he saw the forepaws of an animal and, thinking it was a fox, attempted to get a hold on the nape of the animal's neck. Imagine, then, his surprise when he dragged out a big bobcat.

In the struggle, Raines suffered minor scratches, but with the help of his dog he killed the cat and gave it to the owner of the land on which he was hunting.

Sentence Keeps Mounting as Man Cheers and Jeers

Aberdeen, Wash.—If I. A. Ryals, arrested for drunkenness, had continued with his antics he might have received a life sentence.

Fined $15, he argued with Judge R. E. Taggart despite a warning he was in contempt of court. The judge sentenced him to ten days in jail.

Ryals emitted a sound like a "Brona cheer." The court made the jail term 30 days. Ryals then tossed his head back and hissed. The judge set the term at 60 days.

The jailer then rushed Ryals from the room to prevent more increases.

Crane and Water Snake Stage Death Struggle

Willows, Calif.—F. S. Nay recently told of a primitive battle between a crane and a 4-foot water snake which he witnessed recently in Sutter Basin.

"The crane swooped down, driving its beak through the snake," Nay reported. "In its death struggle the snake coiled around the crane's bill and body, slowly dragging the bird beneath a nearby pool of water, where both apparently drowned."

Shepherd Dog Saves Tot From Mad Police Canine

Seattle—Queenie, a little Belgian shepherd dog, attacked a large police dog snarling from rabies and was bitten ten times while she kept the big animal away from Donald Reed, her three-year-old master.

Her fight gave Lawrence Wehrwein, a neighbor, time to kill the mad dog with a shotgun. A veterinarian placed Queenie under observation.

Old Dutch Customs

Among Holland's quaint farming customs is that of baptizing calves before they are sent out to the fields to graze, the idea being that the sprinkling with water will keep the animals away from the ditches which surround the fields.

The Storm

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"You hear the crying of the wind," said Willy Nilly. "I think we are going to have a bad storm, but we're all safe here. That's a great comfort. You may all blow soap bubbles or do puzzles or anything you like, but I must feel that it's a new year by starting off at once with something I've put off doing. I think I'll attend to my sticking-out, pointed ears first of all. If I could have them all right I would feel that a great deal had been accomplished."

"Whew-ew-ew-ew-ew-ew-eee," went the wind.

The snow was swirling this way and that, but inside Willy Nilly's house it was very comfortable.

"Whew-ew-ew-ew-ew-ew-eee," went the wind again, and a door began to bang and then a terrific drift of snow came into the room.

"Great Hoosters and Little Chickens!" cackled T. P. Natch, "what has happened?"

"Why is all that snow coming in?" quacked Mr. Quacko Duck, and as he spoke more snow came flying into the room.

"I see what the trouble is!" shouted Willy Nilly. "One of the hinges has broken off the front door, and the door is only half on so that the snow is getting in. I'll have to fix it at once."

"Here, let me get at my tool chest. I've known for some time that the door needed fixing. Oh, dear, oh, dear!"

Willy Nilly hurried to the tool chest, but in a second the door had given a mighty lurch and had crashed to the ground.

Talks to parents

Sulks

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

One of the most trying children to deal with is the sulker, who, long after a reprimand or a disappointment, pouts and frowns, to speak. Sometimes he will harbor a grudge and try to get revenge, to satisfy his outraged feelings.

This is a trait that increases by cultivation but which can be eliminated by consistent discouragement. It generally is caused by a feeling of self pity, a state of mind which is acquired very easily, and which is one of the most corroding of which humanity may be possessed.

The child who has been refused permission to do something, or who has been punished for some misdeed, is neither repenting for his sins nor accommodating himself to circumstances when he turns his back on the family and refuses to speak, or goes into his room and sits there in lonely state with his door shut, refusing to answer when spoken to, or to take part in the ordinary activities of life. He is enjoying being sorry for himself, and is letting cancer and unkind thoughts run through his mind.

His behavior is anti-social, and unless this is made clear to him, he will eventually become an undesirable person to have about.

The best time to treat sulks is at their first appearance. If the child is very little, give him something to distract his thoughts and occupy his attention until the sharp edge of annoyance over a disappointment or punishment is gone. If he is older, he must be taught that a pleasant expression and good manners are demanded by society however resentful one may feel.

It is hard to walk with a smile on one's face, and even the desire to sulk is soon forgotten if one has no chance to express it.

Pu-Yi Will Soon Be Made Emperor

Tokyo, Jan. 2 (AP)—Henry Pu-Yi, 24-year-old chief executive of Japan, soon will be made emperor. It was reported on high authority today.

Announcement of the elevation to the throne of other important government officials, is expected to be made January 15, a Tokyo Japanese news agency dispatch said.

The dispatch, from Hosenko (Changchun), capital of Manchukuo, described the expected announcement as "an important manifesto concerning the future policy of Manchukuo which will have a wide-spread effect on Manchukuo's 10,000,000 inhabitants." It was learned the contemplated changes will be made March 1.

It was widely reported the governmental alterations involve establishment of a new fundamental law patterned after Japan's.

Rumanian Cabinet of Slain Duca Resigns

Bucharest, Rumania, Jan. 2 (AP)—The government of Premier Constantine Angelescu, successor to the assassinated Ion G. Duca, resigned today.

King Carol immediately commissioned George Tataru, the resigning minister of commerce, to form a new government in which his majesty hoped Nicholas Titulescu would participate.

Titulescu, the active foreign minister under Premier Duca, had refrained from entering the Duca's cabinet on the grounds that the government should have taken steps whereby the assassination of Duca would have been prevented.

King Carol appointed Constantine Angelescu to form a new cabinet after a student member of the Anti-Semitic Iron Guard shot and killed the former premier, Ion G. Duca, December 29.

Since that time Rumania has been torn with rumors of plots against the government.

Boom-Time Memories Seen In 1934 Sports Program

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

New York, Jan. 3.—The 1934 sports program in the city of New York is a nostalgic reminder of the boom-time memories of the 1920s. The program, which is being presented by the city of New York, is a collection of the best of the city's sports history.

The program, which is being presented by the city of New York, is a collection of the best of the city's sports history. It includes a variety of sports, from baseball to basketball, and from football to tennis. The program is a tribute to the city's sports heritage and a reminder of the boom-time memories of the 1920s.

After an epic battle, the city of New York was able to secure the 1934 sports program. The program is a collection of the best of the city's sports history, and it is a tribute to the city's sports heritage. The program is a reminder of the boom-time memories of the 1920s, and it is a collection of the best of the city's sports history.

Strengthened Diamond Forces. Apparently past the severe financial crisis of 1932-33, organized professional baseball faces the new year with radically altered playing forces. The Boston Red Sox, for example, have been strengthened to challenge the world champion New York Yankees.

Boxing. Hardest hit of all the big professional sports, anticipates two world heavyweight matches without much basis for enthusiasm. Primo Carnera, the Italian holder of the title, is matched with Tommy Loughran for a February match in Miami.

The horses will gallop on more tracks than ever before during the new year. College athletic budgets should be balanced again. Babe Ruth may take his farewell to baseball arms—at half the salary he drew for 1933. Notre Dame should stage a comeback on the gridiron under Elmer Layden. The major league races both should be bigger and better. All at no increase in the price of admission but with the prospect of bigger and better arguments.

Lightning Girls Trip St. Mary's, 18-15

After outscoring the Lightning Five in the first half, 15-14, in the preliminary Tuesday night at the White Eagle, St. Mary's Girls failed to toss the ball through the hoop for even one point in the second half and bowed to their opponents by the tally of 18-15.

Credit for winning the hotly contested feminine struggle goes to the Misses Pratt and Gumaer, who tossed in a field piece for the Lightning Five.

Golden Grin

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

Gordon Stanley Cochrane, the well-known saxophone player, should go long way toward giving the Detroit Tigers the type of baseball leadership they prefer. It may be remarked further, that he was chosen for the job over Babe Ruth.

Master Craftsman. All things considered, Cochrane is the best backstop major league baseball has had since the palmy days of King, Archer, Schalk and Bresnahan. He combines speed with ruggedness, hitting ability and rare aggressiveness.

Four years ago, after Howard Ehmke had stood the Chicago Cubs on their collective heads in the opening game of the world series, I talked with Mordred (Three-Fingered) Brown about the game. Naturally I expected him to dwell at length on the skill of Ehmke in the box, as appreciated by one of the great right-handed pitchers of all time. Quite to the contrary, Mr. Brown went into a rhapsody about Cochrane.

"Cochrane's performance to me, was the standout feature of the game," said Brown, as I recall his words. "He not only did everything mechanically that you could expect but he was away ahead of the ballman every time, outguessing him and getting the maximum out of Ehmke's control. I have not seen anything so good since Johnny Kling was working behind the bat."

Without a Peep. Two years later, strangely enough, Cochrane was a coat of the world series which the Athletics lost to the St. Louis Cardinals, or, to be more specific, to a young man very much on the loose—John Leonard Martin.

Cochrane was not physically in good shape for that series. He was all taped up. Not only had he overworked, but his nerves were on edge. The stock market crash had hit his personal fortunes, as it had other star ball-players. He was not hitting and on top of that he was trying to keep Martin and the rest of the Cardinals in leash while working with a couple of pitchers, Grove and Earnshaw, who spent little or no time worrying how close they kept the runners to the bags before letting the ball go.

It was the toughest kind of a spot for Cochrane, but he took the panning without a peep. When the A's finally got together and roared Martin it was too late to keep the world championship from slipping out of their hands.

Wilbur Defeats The Z.N.P. Quintet On Dulin's Field, 25-23

A field shot by Joe Dulin from the side of the court as the timer's watch ticked off the last few seconds of the extra period that had to be played to decide the winner, won for the Wilbur Five over the Z. N. P. Sporting Club at the White Eagle on Delaware avenue, Tuesday. Final score of the evenly contested skirmish was 25-23.

After passing the rest period with the score knotted at 19 points, the teams continued to dump in points on even terms until the whistle ended the regulation period. At this point the score stood 23 all and the battling eagles went into an extra session to decide the issue. Just as this frame was about to end, Joe Dulin caged his field, winning for the visitors.

Dulin was the leading scorer for Wilbur, registering 10 points during the court fray. Johnny Quest, center of the Z. N. P. Club, tied him for the point-collecting honors.

Wilbur substituted for the Ebblings of Poughkeepsie, that team failing to show up on account of a misunderstanding in booking arrangements. The win was the second within two days for Wilbur, that club having defeated the Rexalls of Rosendale by one point New Year's. Joe Wenzel captured that contest with a foul shot in the last minute of play. Final score of the battle was 25-23.

Trois Play Bigelows At White Eagle Friday, Will Practice Tonight

Jack Tro's Luckies will practice tonight in preparation for their game Friday with the Saugerties Bigelows at White Eagle Hall, Delaware avenue, where a crowd of basketball fans is expected to witness the cage duel which the Troes hope will turn into the sixth victory of the season for them.

Manager "Dolly" Tessie, who has been engaged by Tro to book his quintet, because of his success as pilot of the Z. N. P. Club, said today that the Luckies will take the floor with their regular lineup—"Sinc" Van Etten, "Chips" Rehmer, "Fico" Schline, Don Kelly, Phil Kelly, Bill Kennock, Randy Kiefer and Van Brazer.

On the Saugerties roster are Hayes, Rivenberg, Harris, Reilly, Benjamin, Tonger, Traver and Shackelford.

Starting time of the match, which is expected to give lots of action from the opening to the final whistle, is 8:30. There will be a preliminary featuring the Seventh Ward Democratic team at 7:30. After the game Andy's orchestra will play for dancing.

Continued Praise Accorded Columbia For Stanford Win

Coach Little's Lions Tour Places of Interest Including Movie Lots—Quarterback Cliff Montgomery Gets Screen Test.

By PAUL ZIMMERMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Los Angeles, Jan. 3.—(P.)—The football team that went to bed at 10:30 every night on a long cross-country trek so it might cause the greatest upset in Rose tournament history—Columbia's thirty—went ahead reaping its reward in acclaim today.

Southern California, which likes its football dished up "well done," continued to praise and entertain Coach Lou Little's team that beat Stanford, 7 to 9, New Year's Day.

After a luncheon and tour of Hollywood's picture plants yesterday, the Lions went agrarian today and planned to tour Southern California's citrus grove sections before turning eastward tonight.

McDowell, Tomb Fly Home.

But two of the 20 were missing. They were Owen McDowell, first string quarterback, both of whom contributed to victory. They were flying east in the hope of getting to New York in time for the start of the basketball season. McDowell is captain of Columbia's quintet. They left here last night and hoped to span the country in 20 hours.

Joe Richavich, star tackle for the Lions, was wondering if he hadn't found a thorn in the bowl of roses. The question arose as to whether he sacrificed a year of eligibility to play in the game against Stanford.

Richavich was ineligible through the regular season of 1933 but regained good scholastic standing in time to make the trip west. He will be eligible next fall, but the question of 1935 will have to be settled when the team gets home.

A Contract—Maybe.

Cliff Montgomery, Lion quarterback, was given a screen test but whether he will be offered a contract remains to be seen.

The eastern aggregation will go to Salt Lake City from here, then to Denver, and on to New York.

Comforter Contests Scheduled Tonight

The regular Wednesday basketball program at the Church of the Comforter Hall will go on tonight as follows, offering three games:

Young Wilburys vs. Meteors, 7 o'clock.

Comforter Girls vs. Pickups, 8 o'clock.

Comforter Missions vs. Wilburys, 9 o'clock.

Match Tonight.

Tonight at 8 o'clock Kenneth Craig plays John Mayone.

Salt Is Essential.

Salt in some form is absolutely essential to human life. It is possible to live without actually using salt in food but in such cases it is necessary to eat a large amount of food rich in mineral elements. Primitive peoples secured their salt from either "salt licks" of animals or sent expeditions to the sea and salt springs.

Babe Ruth Starts Grind to Reduce For 1934 Season

Baseball's Greatest Attraction Begins His Grind for Another Season. Despite His 40 Years—Salary Question Not Up Yet.

By HERBERT W. BARKER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Jan. 3.—(P.)—Once more avoider and Babe Ruth have come to their annual parting of the ways.

The farewell to fat becomes a wife more difficult each winter, but the mighty man of the Yankees, baseball's most famous figure for more than a decade, is confident he can get his waitline down to reasonable limits and round into condition for his 21st, and perhaps his last, major league campaign.

"I fooled 'em last year," the Babe said. "They claimed I wouldn't play 160 games and I played 137. I know I've got another season left and I want it to be a good one. If I didn't think I would be good I'd quit right now."

Only five weeks away from his 40th birthday, Ruth cheerfully faces another long siege of indoor workouts before he sets his course for the south and the spring training camp. He's been doing gymnasium work each winter for some years and it has helped him keep his place in the baseball sun long past the span allotted to the average player. His first 1934 workout was slated for today.

Not $52,000 This Year.

There has been no inkling from Yankee headquarters so far as to what salary the Babe will be offered for next season but it probably won't be much more than half of the $52,000 he received in 1933. If the Babe is convinced he's worth more than the Yankees offer, he'll plunge right into another salary tussle with Col. Jacob Ruppert.

Though he yielded his home run throne to Jimmie Fox and barely topped .300 in the batting averages last season, Ruth still must be reckoned as the greatest drawing card in the game. Last year when he pitched the closing game of the season against the Red Sox at Boston, more people turned out than had seen three-game series involving the pennant-winning Washington Senators the three previous days.

Expected to Find China.

but Landed in Michigan.

Robbed in the splendor of a Chinese mandarin, and "making thunder" with pistols in each hand, Jean Nicolet stood in the prow of his bark canoe, the first white man to gaze upon the two peninsulas that are now Michigan, observes a writer in the Detroit Free Press.

His rich garment, embroidered with figures of Asiatic birds and flowers, fluttered in the morning breeze as seven Huron Indians sank their paddles in the Straits of Mackinac and propelled the adventurer westward into the unknown.

He sought the mythical northwest passage to China and he sought Indian tribes whose wealth of furs would enrich France and his employers. He found the tribes. But instead of the passage, Nicolet discovered Lake Michigan and the Northwest Territory.

Three centuries have come and gone since the young Frenchman set out to verify or disprove the dreams of men who remained in their homes—centuries that saw the trail he blazed thrive with commerce and the virgin timber disappear. Yet his name has fallen into the shadows of history, submerged by Marquette, Champlain, Frontenac, La Salle and other heroic discoverers who unveiled a new world.

Historians long have been amused by the fact that as Nicolet entered Michigan he was dressed as a Chinese mandarin. Three reasons have been set forth. One is that he expected to find China beyond the horizon and would be welcomed by strangers in similar attire. A second is that he hoped to awaken some long-buried Asiatic memories in the minds of the savages who were believed to be of Asiatic origin.

Bull Terrier Aristocrat

The bull terrier flaunts the immaculate white cloak of acquittal. White-washed by the body and soul of the bull terrier. Harmoniously have the dark "spots" of his past vanished with the gradual disappearance of the original brindie markings of his close-fitting glossy coat. He is now a gentleman and respectfully owned dog dealing with aristocracy; no longer condemned for keeping bad company, notes a fancier in the Los Angeles Times.

Young English gamblers patronizing the prize-rings and cockpits in the early part of the past century, soon became disenchanted with the slow, brutal exhibitions of fighting bulldogs. They demanded more action. Accordingly, attempts were made to produce a breed with the quick movement of the terrier and the fighting power of the bulldog. The Old English white terrier, now almost extinct, and the bulldog were crossed. The original bull terrier was the result; a massive animal, combining strength with speed.

The entire make-up of the bull terrier suggests ability to defend himself and his master in any emergency. He is an excellent watchdog, with great courage and tenacity; very affectionate and a loyal companion. He has suffered some from a hereditary degeneration of a duct inside the ear which brought about deafness. Breeders have taken this well in hand and have almost entirely eliminated the defect. His weight varies from 12 to 60 pounds. Below 12, he is classed as a toy.

HAPPY NEW YEAR
Happy New Year—this we wish you and all of you. That you may prosper and succeed everything you do. Happy New Year and many more granted to you all. And may you not the victim to sorrow's lonely call. Cheer up, be glad, be bright and do not shed a tear. But start right in and laugh your way all through this great year.

If you cheered when the new year was first proclaimed and you had going on a little spending band now, what role are you rehearsing for, patriot or kiltizer?

Man—I think that women are very salt of the earth. Neighbor—It is very gallant of you to say that, unless I mean that they drive men to drink.

We know we're getting old because most of these modern vampires and hot mamas give us pain in the necking.

A gentleman pretty well picked up the telephone. "Hello! Hello!" returned the operator. "Hello!" "Hello!" "Hello!" "My Gosh!" said the gentleman. "How this thing echoes!"

It's contrary to public decency to dedicate a grave until the occupant has been dead a few centuries.

Man (to small son away from school)—So you're feeling sick, are you? Bluff, I suppose. More—No Dad, meerschaum.

"Do we respect old age?" a dedicate writer inquires. Person who always raise our hat to a restaurant egg.

Girl—Every time I look at you I think of a great man. Her Boy Friend—You flatter me. Who is it? Girl—Darwin.

Buy Now! That hat looks phenomenal. If your suit gets a higher polish on it you can use it as a shaving mirror.

Mamma (to visitor)—Nancy, her telephone! Just listen to her with it—so sweet. Nancy—Hello, hello, hello! Daddy speaking—why the hell do you answer me?

There's too many folks singing "Onward Christian Soldiers" who never expect to get in the parade.

Junior—Why hasn't Daddy much hair? Mother—Because he thinks a lot of dear.

Junior—Then why have got so much mother? Mother (pause)—Go on with your breakfast.

Irate Husband—But, good heavens! Alice, what's the use of keeping charge accounts with four grocers? Wife—Well, you see, dear, makes the bills so much smaller.

HASH... Bad health seems to be more enjoyed by some woman than good health. It gives them something to talk about. To have good neighbors you'll have to be one. To be a man's man, you'll have to be a woman's woman. The low who abides by the instructions of the weak link in the chain letter. The rolling stones gather at the foot of the hill. When love dies, the heart burns in a woman's eye is a child. A homely girl begins to be a joy life about the time a pretty girl is tired of it. Every time a fellow reads a relative's will he can't help but think how much better he could have made it sound. Pap sleeps in his underwear so, when company comes his pajamas will be fresh as nice.
